

TICKY-TACKY

We're noticing decidedly downmarket items being incorporated into professional art—think glitter, tinsel and the like. Maybe crushed velvet and blacklights are next?

INTERACTIVE

The flood of Instagrams taken inside Rain Room during its 2015 stint at LACMA brought back memories of long wait lines and social FOMO back when the installation made its MoMA debut. Want to get people in your space? Look for interactive work.

PILGRIMAGES

Consider the pilgrimage the souped-up version of interactive. Making art viewing into an all-out experience, art-centered trips to the likes of Marfa, Texas and Storm King in upstate New York, are the vacation and day trip requirements for culture hounds.

See the new and next at these fairs this year.

Places To Go

Art X Detroit | TBA

Frieze New York | May

New York Design Week | May

Bushwick Open Studios | June

Venice Biennale | September

Miami Art Basel | December

ART CAFÉS

From Bar Luce at Fondazione Prada in Milan to graffiti artist Andrea Saraiva's Café Henri in New York, art-themed cafés are a new genre of restaurant in their own right.

STREET ART

Continuing in a major way. As wanderlust and social sharing prevail, graffiti tourism becomes a thing. See new London neighborhood-to-know, Peckham.

MARFA, TX

PAST IS PRESENT

ART DECO

Currently influencing the range from brand logos to building exteriors. Maybe the art crowd's annual convergence on Miami is to thank.

MEMPHIS

Characterized by clunky lines, color cacophony and a dance of geometric shapes, the once-hated Italian design movement from the '80s is coming back in a big way.

SO SATTSSASS

BAUHAUS

Up next: Bauhaus, ushered in by the Guggenheim's Laszlo Moholy-Nagy retrospective, a teacher at Bauhaus. Debuting in May.
